Legislation for the Benefit of the Girls Reform School.

Institution Set Forth in the Annual Report-A Desire to Change the Supervisory Power Vested in the Commissioners-A Year's Work.

The annual report of the Board of Trustees of the District Reform School for Girls for the fiscal year 1899 has been submitted to the Attorney General. The attention of Congress is called to the neces-sity of certain legislation for the benefit of the institution. It is suggested that the appointment of the school officers be vested in the Board of Trustees, with the approval of the Attorney General, as is the case with the Boys' Reform School. At present the supervisory power is lodged in the District

It is further said to be desirable that the classification of the institution in appropriation bills and other legislation be changed to "Prisons and Reformatories," rather than remain under "Charities and Correction.

In regard to this subject the report says "A charity is rather one of the various agencies which alleviate distress by medical treatment or by providing a home, or which educate and train, such as a hospital, or a home, or a school for feebleminded children. Practically, too, a charity involves the idea of an institution which is wholly or partially a matter of private initiative and not entirely dependent upon the State. But the prison or reent upon the State. But the prison or re-formatory excludes all of these ideas, and while the latter word is less harsh in de-gree of its applications than the former, they both involve the idea of punishment and disipline, the reformatory dealing with those whose chance for restoration to usa-fulness need not be viewed as entirely lost, or who are just at the threshold of the downward path and may be prevented from starting along it. There can be no ques-tion that this school is in the latter cate-gory."

The question of age at which girls should be admitted to and dismissed from the school, is brought to the attention of Congress. At present girls are admitted up to the age of eighteen years and dismissed at twenty-one. It is the desire of the trustees to secure legislation whereby the age of admission will be reduced. In connection with this the report rays that one-third of the girls in the school are be-tween eighteen and twenty-one years of age, and most of these have been there four or five years. Some of them have been out on probation once or twice and have been returned because they will not work in their places as they ought to do and will not keep themselves and their clothing neat and clean without constant supervision.

"In retaining such girls in the school," the report continues, "many children who might be benefited by the care and training are, of course, kept out. It is believed that many of the girls who are quite willing to be supported at the school until they are twenty-one years old would work as they ought in the places found for them if they knew that instead of being sent back to the school they would be sent to jail or the workhouse after they reach the age of eighteen years. No girl is or should be finally released or honorably discharged from the school until she is able to earn an honest, respectable living, and this 'In retaining such girls in the school,' from the school until she is ab'e to earn an honest, respectable living, and this would be the case in many more instances than now exist if the girls had the spur to duty lying in the consciousness of greater punishment than return to the school if they fail."

The number of inmates in the school at the close of the year was twenty-seven. During the year five girls escaped, three of whom were returned but the other two were not found. Six girls were released to their parents or placed with private families on probation.

One girl, mentally deficient, and requir-

One girl, mentally deficient, and requiring much care and oversight, was returned to her parents because she was not a prop-er subject for the school, the father promising to provide a good home for her. When admitted she had been in a bad physical condition, and was treated at the Freed-man's Hospital for several weeks, where her health improved. The physicians did not consider her mental condition suffi-ciently pronounced to admit her to an in-stitution for feeble-minded children. When a national university.

About two hundred members are expected to arrive today from out of town. Three meetings of the association will be held taken care of, and she had her other children to look after.

The general health of the institution is said to have been very good, most of the aliments of inmates being of a triffing character and not requiring the patient to be confined to her room.

The estimated appropriation needed for the maintenance of the school during the coming fiscal year is $14,425. This includes the salaries of the officers. The cost of maintenance for the previous year was $10,725. To this is added $25,000, the cost for the erection of an additional building. Of the $14,425 estimated for the coming year, $3,100 is for improvements on the present building and for furnishing and equipment for the new building.

, POISONED AND DELIRIOUS.

Abraham Springsteen, in a Letter, Says He Wanted to Die.

Abraham Springsteen, forty-nine years of age, whose home is at 1014 Twenty-second Streets northwest, is a patient at the Emergency Hospital suffering with what is supposed to be delirium tremens. He was received at the institution shortly after 5 o'clock this morning, when he develwas received at the institution shortly after 5 o'clock this morning, when he developed symptoms of laudanum poisoning. A farewell letter and an empty laudanum vial found in his pocket indicate that he had contemplated suicide, and strengthen the belief that he had taken poison.

Springsteen was found wandering about the grounds at the White House. His actions were peculiar and attracted the attention of Sergeant Bryan, of the police squad stationed at the Executive Mansion. He talked with Springsteen, and became convinced that all was not right with the stranger. The man's talk was incoherent, and he acted as though under the influence of a drug.

Sergeant Bryan lost little time in summoning an ambulance, and sending Springsteen to the hospital. There the man lapsed into a comatose state, and was with difficult brought out of it.

The poisoning symptoms finally disappeared and in their stead a well-developed case of what the physicians believe to be delirium tremens manifested itself. After several hours, Springsteen tallied, He did not wholly recover. His incoherent talk continued, and he insisted that he wanted to die. The letter, which was found in a coat pocket, was without an address. It stated that the writer was out of work, and unable to provide for his family; that he was in ill health, and that he was tired of life, and wanted to die.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. When Does the Twentieth Century

Is it in 1900 or 1901?
This is the question that at present is puzzling the inquisitive mind.
The last day of the year 1900 is the end of the nineteenth century, and the list of January, 1901, the first day of the twentieth century—so says Camille Flamarion.
The twentieth century therefore will begin at midnight December 31st.
The Asiatics will begin it before the Europeans, and the Europeans before the Americans. Madrid will be in advance of Washington, and Spain will enter the twentieth century before the United States. What a record the nineteenth century will
